Top Five Cyber Security Threats To Your Money

Protect yourself from the top cyber threats of 2017.

- 1. Ransomware attacks: Hackers can gain access to your computer, encrypt your files and demand a payment in return for your files. Stay safe by backing up your files and using caution when opening email attachments and links.
- 2. IoT & DDoS hacks: Don't be intimidated by the abbreviations. As more devices are becoming internet-enabled (household appliances, vehicles, etc.), the security measures meant to protect these devices aren't keeping up. Stay safe by changing the default username and password through the appliance's hub, either on a webpage, a smartphone app or through the manufacturer's website.
- 3. Hack attacks: Hackers can usually break into a network by exploiting security holes. This allows them to steal your sensitive information and pretend to be you. Stay safe by ensuring that your applications and operating software are regularly updated with the latest security patches.
- 4. Phishing attacks: Emails disguised as communications from trusted companies include a link to a fraudulent website requesting account information and personal details. Stay safe by looking at the URL spelling to ensure there aren't any typos and being very wary about inputting personal and financial details online.
- 5. Typosquatting: This is the newest way hackers spread malware and attempt to steal your information. They create fake news articles with interesting headlines, or 'clickbait,' to entice users to click the link or share the article. Stay safe by bookmarking legitimate news sites and regularly updating your antivirus software.
